Non-Subscribers, 5s. each part, nett. Subscribers' Names received by Dr. Spark, Springfield Villa, Leeds; or Messrs. Lamborn Cock and Co., 63, New Bond-street, London.

DR. SPARK begs sincerely to thank the numerous Organists and Composers who have so promptly sent him their names as Subscribers to, and expressed their best wishes for, the success of the forthcoming serial—The Organists' Quarterly Journal—a work which, it is hoped, will be found extremely useful to Organists, both Professional and Amateur; and calculated to supply a want long felt for good and moderately difficult Original Organ Compositions by experienced Composers. As the subscription is small, and the expenses of producing the work large, Dr. Spark respectfully requests all intending subscribers to send in their names as early as possible.—Leeds, August 24th, 1868.

HENRY SMART'S SIX SACRED VOCAL

DUETS. Price 3s. each.	Poetry by
No. 1. There was joy in heaven...	Bishop Heber.
2. The Lord is my Shepherd ...	W. S. Passmore.
3. When brighter suns and milder skies	W. F. O. Peabody.
4. Faint not, fear not; God is near thee	Jessica Rankin.
5. The Sabbath Bell ...	Eliza Cook.
6. Where the weary are at rest ...	Eliza Cook.

Sold at half-price.

"Mr. Smart never writes carelessly; but these six sacred duets appear to us unusually thoughtful, and instinct with the glow of true religious feeling. No. 1 will be found most acceptable to all who can appreciate pure and conscientious music wedded to really good words. The opening phrase, marked Tempo quasi a piacere, announces the subject of the composition with excellent effect, and gives additional weight to the Cantabile theme which really commences the duet. No. 2 is a charmingly placid and vocal melody, harmonized simply, but with the care and skill of a practised hand; and No. 3 is based on a theme thoroughly in accordance with the hopeful character of the words. The solo, in C minor, for the second voice, is very effective; and there is a figure in the accompaniment in the solo which follows, for the first voice, which forms an agreeable relief to the general simplicity of the pianoforte part. No. 4 deserves equal commendation for the thoughtful care with which the words are expressed; and No. 5, in which the Dominant prevails with much effect, in imitation of the bell, is full of character. The concluding phrase, which dies off upon a repetition of the last two lines of the poetry, is extremely beautiful. No. 6 is fully equal to its companions; and, simply speaks the words with that hopeful tenderness which is the characteristic of all really sacred music. We can conscientiously recommend these duets, not only on account of their intrinsic excellence, but because they will be found extremely useful to young vocalists whose taste has been cultivated beyond the rapid religious "arrangements" of the day."—Musical Times, June 1, 1868.

HENRY SMART'S TRIOS FOR FEMALE VOICES.

No. 1. The Corall'd Caves of Ocean ...	3 0
2. Something brighter, purer far ...	3 0
3. Hope and Memory ...	3 0
4. Night sinks on the wave ...	2 0
5. Oh! Skylark, for thy wing ...	3 0
6. The Bird at sea ...	3 0

Sold at half-price.

"There is a charm about the vocal music of Mr. Henry Smart which irresistibly attracts us. We are certain to find in all he writes, a pure and stingable melody, around which an accompaniment so lovingly clings, that the one seems inseparable from the other. The trios now before us form three of a set of six, remarkable for beauty of melody and clearness of design. The fourth on the list, "Night sinks on the wave," is based on a placid subject, with a triplet accompaniment throughout, and the voice parts are all written with the skill and judgment to be expected from so experienced a hand. The fifth, "Oh! Skylark, for thy wing," is a bright and joyous theme, with occasional solos for all the voices; a trifle, perhaps, more difficult to sing than the first one, but fully repaying any trouble bestowed upon it. No. 6, "The Bird at Sea," is our especial favourite. This is written throughout in Mr. Smart's happiest manner, the voices and pianoforte moving so sympathetically as to demand an equal amount of musical feeling from vocalists and accompanist. A captivating melody in 8 time, expresses the words so perfectly as to be quite a lesson to those composers who often seem to have written an air, and then tried to find some poetry to fit it. Unlike many trios we could name, too, the occasional solos do not appear as if inserted, without meaning, at established points, so that each singer shall have her turn; but seem to grow naturally from the general design of the composition. In conclusion, we can conscientiously say that we have rarely met with any trios for equal voices so thoroughly satisfactory as these; and we shall be heartily glad to see them take the place of those wretched "arrangements" which we so often find in the portfolios of our amateur vocalists."—Musical Times, March 1, 1868.

The Lord is my Shepherd ...	3s.

Sold at half-price.

"The true feeling of the German 'Lied' breathes throughout these compositions, which are evidently the work of an artist who, although a foreigner by birth, has so thoroughly mastered the English language as to enable him to catch the real spirit of the poetry he has undertaken to compose. The tendency of the German songs to degenerate into pianoforte studies, with an accompaniment for the voice, ought to be carefully watched by those composers who should lead, rather than follow, the fashion; and it is because we see a clear vocal melody running through the songs before us, that we are inclined to believe in Mr. Hecht as a composer of the true school. From the six songs we are disposed to select No. 5, 'Give,' as one of the most fluent and melodious of the set. The voice part is pleasing and thoroughly in accordance with the words; and the accompaniment is written with a practised hand throughout. The modulation into the original key, after the pedal on A, at page 5, is exceedingly good; and with a really competent singer—who could take all the high notes, as originally written, we believe that the song would be very effective. No. 1, 'The Fountain,' although gracefully written, is scarcely so much to our mind; but No. 2, 'A Lily thou wast,' and No. 3, 'A Farewell,' are both truly excellent specimens of those vocal works in which instruments and voice are so intimately combined as to demand an equal amount of poetical feeling from both performer and vocalist. No. 4, 'An Old Song,' is with us an especial favourite, the alternation between major and minor having an excellent effect, and the obstinate syncopated accompaniment at the commencement giving a character to the crotchets in the melody, without unduly interfering with the expression of the words. No. 6, 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' convinces us that the composer is more successful in the secular, than the sacred style. The music is well written, but seems rather to have been sought after, than to have come of its own accord. As a song writer in the pure German school, we shall be glad again to meet with Mr. Hecht, for in his compositions we recognise a feeling for melody, and a style free from affectation or mannerism."—Musical Times, February 1, 1868.

“We have here a series of characteristic pieces, ‘Dedicated to his grandchildren,’ by a veteran composer, whose name will always be honourably associated with the history of pianoforte music and the development of the pianist's art. It is now nearly half-a-century since Mr. Moscheles settled in London; and by his various performances, especially of the pianoforte works of Beethoven, led the way towards that general appreciation of what is great in the art which is still happily progressing. Many of Mr. Moscheles' compositions, especially his Concertos and his Studies will, for their own merits, as well as for their influence on the development of the mechanism of pianoforte playing, associate their composer's name with that of Cramer, Hummel, and Kalkbrenner in the history of the art. Since Mr. Moscheles' removal to Leipzig, as Principal of the Conservatoire there, his activity has been as unremitting as in his earlier days; and we have here the most recent results of thought and skill as fresh as those which distinguished their author's career when among us. The duets now referred to are worthy to rank with those charming pieces—the ‘Zwölf Clavierstücke für grosse und kleine kinder’ of Robert Schumann. In both instances a distinctive title is given to each piece, pointing to the characteristic which it is intended to illustrate. No. 1, ‘Brother and Sister,’ has the tranquil flow of pure feeling. No. 2, ‘Affection,’ although less developed, is full of calm expression. No. 3, ‘Altercation,’ an interruption to this equanimity, is a capital musical illustration of such occasional wrangles as will sometimes occur, ‘in the best regulated families.’ This piece is worthy to pair with its author's study, ‘Contradiction,’ No. 3, in his Op. 95. No. 4, ‘Grandfather's Dance,’ is full of quaint character, with a certain formal yet genial grace, such as one might suppose a venerable gentleman to exhibit when disporting with his grandchildren at some juvenile festivity. No. 5, ‘Elegy,’ is a beautiful piece of cantabile writing in which the secondo part is of equal importance with the primo. No. 6, ‘A Fugal Waltz,’ is an admirable example of the power of a master to turn science to the most popular uses. As a Faraday could make the wonders of chemistry intelligible to a young audience, we have here the learned form of the fugue popularised in what is generally considered as a frivolous form—that of the waltz. The subject of a capital dance piece, in three-four time, is changed to six-eight, and converted into a fugue, with great vigour and variety of treatment; reverting, as a close, to the waltz tempo and style. No. 7, ‘The Harper's Ballad,’ just such a strain, with a mixed rhythm, as one might imagine to proceed from a bard of old, has much quaint beauty. No. 8, ‘Grandmother at her spinning-wheel,’ is a simple melody, accompanied by a meandering under-current of triplet passages, suggestive of incessant motion. No. 9, ‘Soldier's Life,’ has the true martial tone in its commencement, leading up to an animated quick step movement. No. 10, ‘Serenade,’ is a graceful piece, of barcarolle character, well contrasted by No. 11, a spirited ‘Quick Step.’ No. 12 is a ‘Tarantella,’ full of true southern impetuosity; very characteristic in that aspect alone, and possessing the additional feature of being difficult throughout as a ‘canon in the octave,’ a form even more difficult to bend to such purposes than that of the fugue. As in the waltz previously referred to, this tarantella is wrought with great power and continuity, forming a worthy and important climax to a collection of four-hand pieces that will interest performers and hearers, and must prove invaluable for the purposes of tuition.”—Musical Times, January 1, 1868.
